ORIGIN OF THE JOHNSON FAMILY Of

New Haven, Conn. and Norwich, N. Y.

The Town of New Haven was established by an English Colony led by Davenport in 1639, and with the earliest Colonists came three Johnsons from England, Thomas, Robert, and John. We are unable to trace our ancestry to either of them, although several genealogists and family historians have claimed that branches of our family descended from one or the other of these three English Johnsons; one going so far as to say that William Johnson known as Windle Johnson, arrived in New Haven from Europe in 1660, when as a matter of fact Windle was in New Haven and owner of a lot as early as 1651. There is no record of any connection or relationship of Windle Johnson with the English Johnsons.

An article published by Donald Lines Jacobus, genealogist, in the New Eng. Gen. and Hist. vol. 66, p. 15, entitled "Dutch Johnsons of Connecticut," furnishes much information that may shed light on the ancestry of Windle Johnson; however he makes no attempt to trace any relationship of Windle Johnson to the Dutch Johnsons who settled in Branford and Wallingford.

The Dutch settled in Branford and at Dutch Wharf and around Wallingford as early as 1640, and many of them changed their names to Johnson and adopted the English manner of names. The Dutch who settled in those towns came from Flatbush, Long Island and from Manhattan. Windle Johnson was associated with the settlers of Wallingford but it does not appear that he was related to them. Most of them were descendens of Jan Vander Bosch from Flatbush and Manhattan. It is probable that Windle Johnson and his brother John Johnson and his uncle Richard Johnson, the Dutchman, came with the Dutch to Branford or Wallingford and thence removed to New Haven.

Windle Johnson, who afterwards assumed the name of William Johnson and his brother John Johnson and his uncle Richard Johnson arrived in New Haven about 1645 and from that time were active members of the Colony. The fact that Windle (a corruption of Wendel) is a Dutch name and his uncle known as Derrick Johnson and also as Richard Johnson the Dutchman, establishes that they came from Manhattan or a nearby settlement.

The names Wendel, Windall and Windle are one and the same in derivation; they are forms of the Dutch name Wendel which was common among them. The name was used by several different Dutch families in America; we find the name Wendel in the Dutch settlements at Manhattan, Flatbush, Albany, in New York and in Hartford, Wallingford, Branford and other Conn. settlements. The name was foreign to the English and they were not particular about its spelling. It was generally a family name but has been often used as a given name, as Wendel Phillips, Wendel Holmes, Wendel Wilkie and others. It is said that the Wendel Family of America was from the Ryneland or Delphland, Holland.

The Pathfinder Magazine, Sep. 21, 1940, commenting on the name says: "This is a Teutonic name dating back to the seventh century, Wendalinous or Wendelin, patron saint of shepherds and peasants, spelled with either one or two l's indicates a wanderer." (Saint Wendelin Day, October, 28th)

My Aunt Katherine, my father's sister, many years ago stated to me that our family, according to tradition came from Hanover, Germany. I was unable to find any record to bear out such a tradition but this year (1948) I have found records of the family and related families that indicate that the tradition was perhaps founded upon facts. Windall who lived in New Haven was probably related to the Windels of New York and the New York family was from Emden, near Hanover now in the province of Hanover.

In the New Haven Town records Vol. I, p. 356, at a meeting of the General Court, with the Governor present, on the 10th of June, 1658, appears the following:

"Duncan Miles propounded that one Windle, a Dutchman, (who hath lived in his family and carried it well) desires that he may be admitted a planter with us, against which none objecting, it was referred to the Committee settled for the admitting of planters."

In the same record at page 357 a General Court held Dec. 7, 1658, appears the following:

"Thomas Morris desired the Court to take into consideration the price of a piece of cloth sold by John Thompson to Windall, a Dutchman, (That did help about the vessel) at 20 s. a yard which he judged an excessive price."

This Windle or Windall does not appear to have taken a piece of ground but died or left the Colony soon afterwards, as we find no other record of him.

Everett Jansen Wendel, came to Manhattan in 1644 and lived there five years, then moved to Albany. He married and left a number of descendents from whom most of the Wendels trace their lineage. He was born in 1615 at Emden which at that time was a part of Holland. Richard Johnson or Derrick Johnson, the Dutchman, was about of the same age as Everett and must have arrived about 1644. He was an uncle of Windle and John Johnson and he left his estate to Windle. The man introduced by Deacon Miles in 1658, having a family, must have been born about the same time as Everett and Richard and these three Wendels were probably brothers and came from the same place at the same time.

The Sorbs or Wendes

Before 700 A.D. in the reign of Charlemagne, a Slavic tribe overran a part of Germany. They called themselves Sorbs. They were gradually overcome by the Germans and confined to a small territory between Brandenburg in Prussia and Saxony in Eastern Germany. They were given the name of Wendes by the Germans. This word is also an Anglo Saxon word and the English meaning is to go or travel about, a wanderer. No doubt they were a pastoral people and wandered in Germany like Gypsies. Hence the name Wendel derived from Wend means to wander and indicates that Wendel was a part of the Slavic tribe called Wends. In their wanderings they must have reached the border of Holland about the time the Anglo Saxons invaded England during the fifth and sixth centuries.

They wandered to the coast of the North Sea in Holland and became a seafaring people; the shield of Wendel is made up of sailing ships on a white background. The Wendels who arrived in America were not farmers. They were Slavic but during the centuries they became Germanized and were considered a part of the Teutonic race. The Wends were peasants and uneducated—a tough, hardy lot capable of enduring great privation and of laboring long and hard. The Germans considered them an inferior race.

They have lived up to their name and wandered over much of Europe and America. Whether they were Slavic, Teutonic or Dutch matters little to us as far as blood goes. The Johnsons of New Haven have married English people for many generations and may be said to be English, although some of the Wende traits may show up at times.

Deacon Miles was closely associated with Windle Johnson and his uncle Richard Johnson; they had seats near each other in the church and it is fair to presume that Miles introduced the newcomer Windal, upon the recommendation of Windle or Richard or because he was a relative of the Johnsons.. We find that some of the Wandels settled in Flatbush and the settlements nearby. This Wandel was a worker around the ships and was probably a carpenter.

We exclude the English Johnsons and the Dutch Johnsons from the Vander Bosch Family of Branford and this leads us to the Wendels of Manhattan and neighboring Dutch settlements.

Surnames and family names were little used by the Dutch and this may account for the non use of Wendel by Everett Jansen Wendel and by Richard Johnson and his nephews. It was an universal practice by the Dutch to name their children after parents and grandparents and add names indicating a son of a certain family. The name Windle Johnson indicates that Johnson (Jansen in Dutch) was son or grandson of Wendel; the eldest son generally took the name of his father.

It seems quite clear that Windle Johnson was Wendel Jansen (pronounced Yonson) meaning in Dutch the son of Wendel. I do not claim Everett Jansen as a relative but by him we are able to locate the Wendel families as coming from Emden, then a part of Holland. All the Wendels came from the same place and arrived at Manhattan at about the same time. Derrick Johnson was born about 1600 and came to Manhattan about 1644. If we judge by the course of other Dutch reaching New Haven, he went from Manhattan to Flatbush, then to Branford or Wallingford, Conn., thence to New Haven in 1645. He joined the New Haven church in 1646. At that time he had with him two young nephews about ten years old.

JOHNSON LINEAGE

First Generation

No. 1.

William Johnson, known as Windle and Wingle Johnson. Of Dutch ancestry, probably the Wendel Family. Born about 1630 in Holland, probably at Emden, now a part of Germany. Arrived at Manhattan about 1644; removed to Wallingford or Branford, Conn. Settled in New Haven, Conn. 1645. Died in New Haven, 1716, aged 86.

His name first appears as a witness in a court proceeding, Oct. 8, 1651. He acquired a lot in New Haven at that time and in 1652 assigned it to his brother John Johnson "so long as he stays in town but no longer."

He bought a lot of his Uncle Richard or "Derrick" Johnson Oct. 19, 1666 and sold it to John Winus, a Dutchman. In 1668 he bought 9 to 10 acres of Samuel Whitehead on West Hill. The Town allotted him 40 acres on the west side of town and made him a second grant in 1682. He also owned land in Wallingford and seems to have been in the real estate business.

He joined the First Church of New Haven (Congregational) 1688. Member of Trained Band 1665; sergeant 1665. Signed the Wallingford pact by his mark (Sheperd p. 39). He also signed a settlement with his wife's people for property in Wallingford by his mark. Constable 1683; road viewer 1676; road overseer 1680. Made a will August 1716. Inventory of estate 70 pounds.

A deed to Jesse Johnson for lands in Woodbridge, dated Mar. 1, 1776, gives his residence as New Haven, Conn. This might indicate that he did not come to Woodbridge until that date but his marriage took place in Woodbridge in 1772, which is probably the date of his coming to Woodbridge.

During the Revolution, Jesse Johnson was a member of the Conn. Militia and he was drafted for the Continental Line. He failed to appear and paid a fine of $25.00. No subsequent action was taken and he was probably found not fit for military service. The Original receipt for the fine is in a museum in New York.

A deed in 1828 by Thomas Johnson to Amos for lands in New York, mentioned lands owned by Jesse. Thomas signed as a single man in 1828 and on Dec. 20, 1830 he and his wife signed a deed to Hiram Johnson. These deeds show that Thomas married between 1828 and 1830.

JOHNSONS OF NORWICH, NEW YORK

bn. July 5, 1808, Hamden, Conn. dd. Nov. 16, 1889, Wheatridge, near Denver, Colo. A. 81. Riverside Cemetery.

Thomas Perkins Johnson was a typical Connecticut Yankee, in appearance, language, training and action. He was six feet tall, thin and angular, crisp in speech and keen of thought. In Iowa, where he lived for a number of years, he was often spoken of as Yankee Johnson. He learned the cabinet maker's trade and generally followed that work though he was a carpenter and in later years a broom maker. When I was a small boy I saw him at his work in his shop adjoining his home in Iowa, making brooms, ax handles and similar articles. He was steady at his work and became noted for the fine quality of handles, which he made with hand tools.

He was temperate at all times and took very little interest in anything except his trade and his home. He never expressed himself about religion nor engaged in any controversy about politics or public affairs. He was not of a fighting disposition but rather quiet and retiring.

When he was eighty years old he stated to me that he was born near New Haven, Conn. and moved to Norwich, New York when he was a boy. He said that he remembered well the "Blue Laws" of Connecticut and remembered that men were arrested for travelling or working on Sunday and a man was not permitted to drive teams and wagons to church on Sunday. Men rode to church on horseback with their wives riding behind upon a cushion called a "Pillion." He said that he had been brought up in the Episcopalian church but after many years away from its influence he had become "warped."

He told in considerable detail about his trip to California in 1852 during the "gold rush." He sailed on a ship with several neighbors from New York City, around by way of Cape Horn and was several months on the water. He said that Silas Holmes, a neighbor, went with him. On the west coast of South America a number of his fellow passengers were sick with the yellow fever and a number died. He arrived safely at San Francisco and found the gold fields overcrowded and he worked in San Francisco about a year driving a dray team and saved his money. He left New York on Saturday before Mar. 24, 1852, with three neighbors on the steamship Illinois and returned before March 23, on Friday, with A. C. Greeman on steamship Ohio, (newspaper item), now more than one hundred years ago.

He returned home by way of boat to Panama and horseback across the Isthmus and then by boat to New York. He was more thrifty than his friends and neighbors and two of them borrowed money of him in order to get home. He said that they were so ungrateful that they attempted to rob him of the money he had remaining to take himself home to his family. During his absence his family, consisting of nine motherless children, suffered for want of food, clothing, and shelter.

He was unable to do much for the family and the boys went out to work for themselves and the girls were cared for by an Aunt and Uncle. A few years after this California trip he married again and about the time of the Civil War he moved to Abingdon, Jefferson County, Iowa, where he afterwards lived for many years. Age finally kept him from his work and he and his wife went to San Bernardino, Calif., and lived a year or two with their daughter, Harriet. While in California, his second wife died. About 1885 he came to Jefferson County, Colorado, and lived with his son, Thomas, until his death in 1889.

He had the qualities of a good citizen and ability to obtain any reasonable ambition, but he preferred to live a plain and simple life without the worries and heartaches of publicity and wealth. His father-in-law said "The Devil owed him a debt and paid him off with son-in-laws." Wagner, his father-in-law, measured men by their ability to earn and keep money and to him Thomas was a poor financier and not a success.

He lived at our home the last year of his life and I remember that he had a full set of carpenter tools of a very old fashioned make. They were made of wood except the cutting blades of the planes, even the holder of the bit was of wood with a brass socket. None of our family appreciated the value of these articles as family relics and historical pieces. I regret very much that none of the tools were preserved by the family.

It was the custom of the Dutch, as well as other Europeans to follow the trade of their ancestors which often covered several generations. Thomas Perkins Johnson was a carpenter and house builder and he also worked at the trade of a cabinet maker, probably for his father-in-law, Frederick Wagner. He told me that his father, Jesse Johnson, died while at a house "raising" from which I infer that he was building the house with the aid of others.

Trades were not taught at that time but were learned by serving with tradesmen. We might conclude that Thomas and Jesse were following their forefathers in the carpenter trade and this would include all the ancestors back as far as William Johnson or Windle, as he was known. The Johnsons were not farmers but lived in town and engaged in trades, and it is a good conclusion that they were carpenters and builders. Probably Wandal who worked about the ships was one of the family.

It was a well established custom with the Dutch to name their children after the father or grandfather and using a family name indicating a son or grandson.

For convenience in recording the descendents of Thomas Perkins Johnson and his wife Maryanna C. (Wagner) Johnson we have designated in Roman numerals the beginning of the families.

Family III.

THOMAS WALLACE JOHNSON

We have only the statements of Thomas himself concerning his youth and early education. His father had a large family and was busy most of the time trying to feed and clothe them, and being a man of gentle disposition he exercised very little control over the growing boys. Thomas and his brothers just grew up in a small town, following their own will and inclinations. He wandered over the hills and through the country until familiar with country life, which ever afterwards drew him away from the cities. He often told with pleasure of trips that he took with his father through the country. Once, I remember, was a visit to nesting place in the forest of great flocks of passenger pigeons and where he saw the men exterminating the squabs for food.

Poverty of the large family led the boys to take whatever kind of work they could obtain. He drove a horse pulling boats on the Erie Canal, did odd jobs about the tannery and slaughter house. He also learned the trade of broom making and followed different occupations as they came along but after reaching mature years the most of his life was spent upon the farm.

He disliked to attend school, as most boys do, and left school when a small boy with only the rudiments of an education. His mother was a woman of some education and of very good mentality; she saw the need of education and endeavored to keep him in school but her efforts failed. The Johnson family owes much to the mentality of Maryanna Wagner Johnson. She was a woman of high intellect and a fine character, and so far as she could she left an influence to her children that has kept them in a high field. Thomas was not a man of education but he had a keen intellect and practical and sound judgment.

His mother encouraged him to go west and in the fall of 1840 he came west to Knox County, Illinois, where his mother's father was living with one of his daughters. He went by way of the railroad just beginning to operate between New York and Chicago. He stayed in Illinois a couple of years and then went farther west to Clark County, Iowa. He remained there six years farming and in improving a farm of two hundred acres. He fell sick with malaria, a common disease on the prairies, and he became homesick and at the invitation of his eldest sister, Adelaide, he sold out his farm for a small sum and came back to his sister's home in Abingdon.

As he drove into the village with an ox team he stopped to inquire of a young woman drawing water from a well, for directions to his sister's home. He fell in love with the young woman at sight and soon afterwards they were married and settled in Abingdon. Her name was Parlia A. Hiatt. He always spoke kindly of her and her memory was dear to him. He farmed with some small success for several years until his wife became sick then he gave up farming and took her to Wisconsin for her health. She died however on his return and her loss seemed to take away much of his energy and his farm operations thereafter in Iowa were not successful.

He married my mother and struggling along as a poor farmer for a few years and sick most of the time with malaria. He moved farther west to Stanton, but he stayed but a short time in Iowa. All the years of his life in Iowa were filled with poverty and in 1879 he left Iowa in a covered wagon and stopped a while at Naponee, Neb. and then came to Colorado, arriving in Denver in April, 1881.

He began farming in Jefferson County in 1882 and continued in that occupation until his death in 1902. His second wife died in 1892, leaving several small children. After the children were grown he married Miranda Cruthers. He had better success in Colorado and managed to make enough to care for his family and keep some for his old age.

He was six feet tall and weighed about 180 lbs. and in his young manhood he was a powerful individual. He was high tempered and easily aroused, but soon cooled and was never cruel nor did he hold a grudge. He was always respectful to women and kind to children. He often engaged in fighting when he was a young man and took good care of himself but as he grew older he saw the foolishness of such conduct and kept control of himself. He constantly counseled his sons to avoid fighting.

He joined the Methodist church in Iowa and after his second marriage he joined the Christian Church with his wife, but he was never a good attendant. He constantly taught his children to lead honest and moral lives and to have high ideals and he did his best to give them an education. Few families have had a father who taught a better life or left as good an inheritance of strength and mental keenness and energy. He taught us to live without taking from us our independence and individuality.

HIATT FAMILY

The Hiatts were Quakers from near London, England. The first member to come to America was John Hiatt, who arrived in Philadelphia in 1690 and removed to Fredericks County, Va., 1737. His son John removed to North Carolina and was living there during the Revolution. The Battle of Guilford Court House was fought on his farm and he being a Quaker would not bear arms but during the battle his house was turned into a hospital.

His son, Joseph Hiatt, was born in North Carolina and the Quakers were opposed to Slavery which brought them in conflict with the neighbors and most of the Quakers left North Carolina and came into the Northwest Territory. John Hiatt, the son of Joseph removed to Ohio, where Greenberry Hiatt was born. With a number of other Quakers Greenberry removed to Henry County, Indiana, where there was a meeting place of Quakers. Here Parlia Hiatt was born and Greenberry and his family moved to Jefferson County, Iowa. where Parlia married Thomas W. Johnson. Afterwards Greenberry and his family removed to Clide, Cloud County, Kansas, where Greenberry resided until his death at age of 90 or 96.

A detailed history of the family may be obtained from the Encyclopedia of Quaker Meetings in most public libraries.

FRANK THOMAS JOHNSON

Frank Thomas Johnson was born Nov. 10, 1860, in a log house known as the "Bill Sears Place," in Jefferson County, Ia. about two miles below Abingdon, and spent most of his boyhood on a farm. His mother died when he was ten years old, and his father married again and he lived in the family until he was past twenty-seven years of age.

He attended the public school, primitive in methods of teaching in Abingdon, Ia. After passing the study requirements of that school he took a course in business college at Keokuk, Ia., which completed his school education. During this period he farmed in the summer months and studied books in a wide range of subjects.

He accompanied his father and family west and arrived in Denver, Colo., in 1881. He farmed for a few years and began the study of law by reading Sharswood's Blackstone Commentaries. I remember well his beginning of the study of law on the farm. When he was a boy he declared that some day he would become a lawyer and entered upon the study at his first opportunity. He was always studious and fond of reading and applied himself to Blackstone with a determination to succeed. He took up the study of law in the law office of Rogers and McCordo on 15th Street, Denver, and after three years study passed the examination and was admitted to the Bar by the Supreme Court of Colorado, 1885.

He took up the general practice of law in Denver until 1894 at which time he was elected one of the District Judges of Arapahoe County. He served a term of six years and was reelected and served another six years. He was defeated for a third term in the election of 1906, and again entered upon the practice of law. He continued with considerable success until 1928 and then retired and is living in Denver as I write this.

In his retirement he has continued his studies and has written articles upon various subjects. His autobiography is an interesting literary production. It not only gives the personal side of his life, but is filled with the history of Denver and its leading citizens of his time. His opinions on public questions and his philosophy of life are worthy of study by anyone.

His reputation as a judge was of the highest character. His honesty, sincerity, legal ability, and judicial temperament, made him one of the outstanding judges of his time. He has brought up and educated a large family who are making good in the world for themselves.

His was a full and complete life, not for wealth, but for the best in citizenship and manhood.

WALTER HENRY JOHNSON

Walter Henry Johnson spent his boyhood on the farm in Iowa. His mother died when he was five years old and he was brought up by a step mother. He was not as obedient and industrious as his Brother Frank and in boyhood was fond of hunting, fishing and trapping and of wandering alone in the woods and through the country.

He attended the public school at Abingdon and Stanton, Ia., and Naponee, Neb., and at Wheatridge, Colo. He came with his father and brother to Colorado in 1881 and attended two years at the Denver University.

He thought that the close study at the University was injuring his health and he stopped attendance at the University and went to Montana. There he took up a homesead on the Yellowstone River and lived on it as a bachelor for several years. He sold the farm and returned to Denver and conducted a meat and fish store. He married and moved to Montrose, Colo., and took charge of a large irrigation system which he carried on successfully for a number of years. He returned to Denver and engaged in the real estate business and took a part in politics. For a number of years he was an employe of the City of Denver as a Fire Warden. In 1906 when his Brother Frank was defeated for reelection as District Judge, he lost his position with the City.

He sold out his Denver property and went to the State of Washington. He had invested his earnings in Colorado wisely and on leaving Denver he sold out and took with him several thousand dollars. He located at Yakima, Washington and engaged in the real estate business and planted an orchard on his farm in the center of the Apple District. In both undertakings he was successful and made a small fortune. In 1920 he sold his farm in Yakima and moved to Seattle and invested in real estate in that city. He built an apartment house there and retired from business until his death in 1940.

He had more than ordinary ability as an author and has written several books and one "Bay Billy" he had published. In his writings he shows education, training and skill in the use of language and in plot and in action. Writing is a hobby with him but he has been practical in life and has been a successful business man. He has a family of three children and has given them college educations.

He does not have the patience and dogged endurance and determination of his Brother Frank but he is equally energetic. and active and as clear a thinker and his mind is more of a literary character.

DANIEL AUGUSTUS JOHNSON

Daniel Augustus Johnson, when a young man in Norwich learned the butcher trade and meat business and followed this line most of his life. He was a bright and active young man and acquired a good business education. He was successful in business and made money enough to care for a large family and saved enough to take care of himself and wife in old age.

He was one of the kindest of men and lived for his family. He was temperate in his habits and active and industrious even into the years when most men have retired. He always took an interest in public affairs and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. I visited him when he was nearly ninety and he listened to the news over the radio and was able to discuss in an interesting way the topics of the day. He was especially interested in the Smith-Hoover campaign and expressed sound opinions about the political outcome. He said that Smith could not be elected on account of his religion.

Except for a short visit to Iowa, he spent his life in the State of New York. His married life was exceptional, its happiness and lasting qualities stand out a shining light to all. He married when eighteen years old to a girl of the same age who proved to be a kind and devoted wife and mother. They lived together in perfect harmony for over seventy four years until they both were over ninety. They reared and educated a large family and were married seventy four years, ten months and one day.

They died six weeks apart and were buried in one grave in the country where they had passed three quarters of a century together. I visited the family in 1929 at the home of their daughter Truth Bristol on a farm at Hartwick near Cooperstown, N. Y. He was still mentally active and interested in politics, baseball and news generally.

Catherine Carey Knollys, niece of Anne Boleyn and Cousin of Queen Elizabeth was the chief lady of the bedchamber of the Queen. dd. Jan. 15, 1568 at Hamden Court, while attending the Queen. Buried in St. Edmonds Chapel, Westminster. Some historians say that she had thirteen children others say that she had seven sons and four daughters. The names of her children and their order of birth as I find them to be are:

Elizabeth	Francis
Lettice	John
Robert	Nathaniel
Thomas	Penelope
Anne	Catherine
Walsingham	Eleanor or Helen

A55. Dau. Lady Elizabeth West, Eldest child bn. Sep. 11, 1573. dd. Jan. 15, 1632, A. 59. Present at her baptism, were Queen Elizabeth, and Countess of Lincoln and Earl of Leicester. Sister of Sir Thomas West, 3d Lord Deleware. (33 N. E. Hist. and Gen. Mag. p. 285.)

NOTE: Elizabeth West was a member of the Le la Warr Family and a descendent of Charlemagne, Alfred the Great, William the Conqueror, and the Plantagenet Kings, thus related to the Royal Families of England and Europe. The West Family was distinguished in war and peace and had among its members many of the leading men of England. They were descended from some of the Barons selected to secure the Magna Charta. Many of their ancestors were soldiers in the Crusades and gave their lives in support of Christian claims to the Holy Land.

The West Family was connected with the early settlement of America. Sir Thomas West, 3d Lord De la Warr, brother of Elizabeth West gave much of his time and wealth to the Virginia Colony and was its first Governor. She was a sister of Penelope West who settled in Boston. Her Brother John West was an early settler of Virginia and one of its governors; he had a leading part in the development of the Colony. He left a number of American descendents. Among them was Martha Washington a grand niece of Elizabeth West.

Her Importance, her breeding and education is shown by the epitaph over her grave. On the north wall of the church of Fordingham, England, under the name of DelaWarr in letters of gold is the following inscription:

“Behold, buried at your feet are the remains of Elizabeth, once the wife of Herbert Pelham esq. sprung from the illustrious family of the Lords of de la Warr; whose youth was spent in the palace of our most serene Queen Elizabeth, her god mother; the rest of her life was spent inside private walls ;the whole course of her life was devoted to the greatest piety; and she departed this life in blessed peace, January 15, 1632, aged 50."

A57. Mar. Sep. 4, 1621 at Salisbury, Eng. (His second wife)

JOHN HUMFREY OR HUMPHREYS, Gent. Lawyer of Chaldon, Dorset. (Said to have been a double wedding)

(HUMFRY AS WRITTEN BY HIMSELF)

From the Anglo-Saxon word Humfred meaning "home peace"

He was born 1593-1596, County Dorset, on the south coast of Eng. dd. in London about 1652.

He was admitted as a law student at the Lincoln Inn of the Court in 1615, as son and heir of Michael Humfry, of Corfe Castle, Dorset. It was probably at this school that he became acquainted with the Pelham family, as one of the Pelham sons was a student there. He was the only child of Michael Humfry and his wife Dorothy Bawls. Michael Humfry was the agent of Viscount Vindon of Chaldon, (Visitation 1623). He died in London, April 3, 1626.

Humphreys in early life was a lawyer at Chaldon but later located in London. His first wife died soon after their marriage and he married 2d, Elizabeth Pelham and thus became a relative of the Le la Warr Family and was known around London as connected with Thomas West, Lord Le la Warr.

He lived at the Dr. Denison house near Cree Church in London but also maintained a country place called, the Dolphin, at Sandwich on the coast; he was properous and lived in the style of a gentleman.

He was a charter member and one of the founders of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and the original Treasurer of the Dorchester Company, 1630. Elected Deputy Governor of the Bay Colony, Oct. 20, 1629. Member of the Plymouth Company in England. Arrived at Salem, Mass. June, 1634, with his third wife Susan Clinton, Dau. of the Earl of Lincoln and their two daughters, Dorcas and Sarah, and Anne Humphreys, one of two children by his former marriage with Elizabeth Pelham.

He was admitted to the Salem Church, Jan. 16, 1638; Major General of the Colony, 1641; member of the Artillery Co. of Boston, 1640. Took part in the Colonial Wars; One of the founders of Cambridge College, afterwards a part of Harvard Univ. He was on the committee 1636 that selected Marblehead, afterwards Cambridge, for the College for which the Colony appropriated 400 pounds. Took oath of allegiance to the Colony May 25, 1636.

He lost his entire fortune, amounting to more than $20,000, in the Colonial venture. He published his "Farewell Sermon, God's Promise to His Plantation" and returned to England in 1641. He lived with his son in London for a time; made his will Dec. 16, 1651. Administration granted June 4, 1653. His death must have occurred between those two dates.

He was a man of great intellect and energy and left the stamp of his greatness on all his work and endeavors for the Colony in New England.

NOTE: The Essex Institute History, in vol. 6 5, p. 293, has an article written by Frances Ross Troup that gives a complete history of the activities of John Humphreys in the Mass. Bay Colony. It shows that Anne Humphreys, who married William Palms, was the daughter of John Humphreys by his second wife Elizabeth Pelham, granddaughter of Lord De la Warr.

Elizabeth Pelham Humphreys died Nov. 1, 1628, and Humphreys thereafter married Susan Clinton and was expecting a child in August, 1631. From the probate records of Essex County it appears in vol. 3, 366, that Anne, the widow of William Palms, married John Miles after the death of Palms, and she appointed her son-in-law, Griffen Edwards her attorney to collect or recover her the estate of her father John Humphreys.

Edwards presented Anne's petition to the probate court and testimony was taken and a trial had. He produced a certificate from the Mayor of Clonnell, Ireland showing that he had administered the estate of William Palms and that Anne, his widow, was the reputed daughter of John Humphreys and his only surviving heir.

Joseph Humphreys, son of John Humphreys administered the estate in Mass. and he assisted in the claim of his half sister Anne Palms Miles. Elizabeth Pelham, a niece of John Humphreys had been in charge of the property and the probate court at a trial, Sep. 26, 1672, ordered the Pelham woman to turn the property over to Anne Palms Miles.

All the descendents of Humphreys by his third wife died in either America or England. His son John died in London leaving no heirs. Strange as it may seem out of a family of nine children not one left an heir, except Anne Palms Miles.

NOTE: Anne Humphreys married William Palms and by him had several children, the eldest being Susanna Palms. After the death of Palms in Ireland Anne returned to America and married Mr. Miles, a minister.

William Palms took oath to Colony of Mass. Bay, Nov. 10, 1652; had come to the Colony from England about 1650. His residence in Ireland was after his marriage in 1651 and there is no evidence that he had been in Ireland previous to that time. His family was of English origin and not Irish.

The Palms family was of considerable antiquity and located in County Somerset as far back as the 12th century, reign of Edward II. William Palms of Somerset acquired the estate of Naburn in Yorkshire by marriage in 1226. There has been continuous succession from father to son from that date. The record of visitation was entered by William Palms in 1530 as a family of Landed Gentry.

The members of the family for many generations have been engaged the professions, such as lawyers, judges, doctors and ministers the last being the most numerous. It is my opinion the William Palms, who married Anne Humphreys, was a minister and was thus engaged in Ireland.

We have made no attempt to trace the lineage of William Palms to the Palms of Naburn, Yorkshire, but every indication is that he was of that family. An Edward Palms whose descent from that family has been established was in Mass. Bay about the time that William was there. He removed to New Haven 1658, to Milford in 1659 and to New London in 1660. It is a fact worthy of noting that Susanna Palms lived in Swanzee, Mass. and was married there to Samuel Avery, a resident of New London, and he returned with his wife to that place. We might infer that Avery became acquainted with Susanna Palms through Edward Palms of his town. Probably Edward and William were brothers or cousins.

NOTE: Elizabeth Harris, our great-great grandmother, who married Amos Walworth, might appear at first consideration an unimportant person, however the facts are that she and her family were active supporters of the Revolution and she was a woman of great intellect. Her ancestry contained the best blood and intelligence of the American colonists. Her father was a leading citizen of New London and an officer in the Militia. Her mother, Phoebe Denison, came from a highly educated and important family. Her Grandfather George Denison, was the most conspicuous soldier in the Colonies.

Her Grandmother Ann Borodell Denison, was a woman of extraordinary intelligence and culture; she was the mother of a large family, many of whose descendents have been persons of prominence. One of them was John Denison, Justice of the Supreme Court of Colorado. She lived to be 97 years old.

Another ancestor was William Wetherell, a minister, and well educated man, and his son was one of the Judges of the Court in New London.

She was a descendent of William Brewster, the leading Pilgrim on the Mayflower and fourth signer of the compact, the first written Constitution for self government by people.

One of her ancestors, Robert Campbell, was from a family that has produced many leading men in different walks of life, in several different states.

WAGNER

Frederick Wagner was born in New York State upon the Battlefield of Saratoga, known as Burgoyne's Surrender, at about the date of the battle, October 17, 1777. His father was an officer in the Hessian Army and his mother came with him from Germany. He was not a Hessian but was an officer in the Prussian Army from Koenigsberg, East Prussia. His grandfather, John Wagner was an officer in the Army of Frederick the Great and was a Collector at the Port of Koenigsberg. Frederick's father was an officer in the Prussian Army and joined the Hessian Army, hired by the British to come to America.

Frederick's father and mother were taken prisoners at the surrender of Burgoyne and transported to Worcester, Mass., for safe keeping and it is recorded in the Church there that John Frederick Rudolf, son of John Jacob and Caterina, on Tuesday, May 19, 1778, Hessian Prisoners of war of the Regiment of Von Hessen Gagerhosper was baptized. He afterwards just used his middle name of Frederick. It is a tradition of his family that he was born on the battlefield and the only battle was that of Saratoga, Oct. 17, 1777.

Frederick's father did not return to Germany but remained in Worcester until Frederick was grown. Frederick grew up as an American and received a good education. In about 1795 he removed to Leyden, Mass., where he married Anna Walworth, Dau. of one of the early settlers of Conn. Jan. 3, 1799.

He removed with his family to Chenango County, New York in 1805 and settled in Chenango County where he lived until a short time before his death, 1868, age 90 yrs.

He was the great Patriarch of our family and was noted for his kindliness, honesty, industry, good judgment, and gentlemanly manners. The members of the Johnson Family have looked upon him as a character to admire and follow and such is the feeling of members of the family to this day.

It was his custom to begin the day with family prayer, and readings from the Bible and he endeavored to live each day as a Christian. However, when he was past eighty years of age he made a visit to Thomas W. Johnson, his grandson, and stated to him, in reviewing his past, that he had joined the Church when sixteen years of age and had been a faithful member for more than fifty years but he had reviewed his beliefs and had doubts of immortal life. Death seemed the end of all.

He and his wife brought up a large family. He often stated that he was like the Quaker who thought the Devil owed him a debt and paid him off with son in laws. The boys of his family, though, all made good in the professions and business. One son was a Doctor, another a Judge of Court and another, a prominent portrait painter.

In the local newspaper at the time of his death appeared the following item;

“Died in this village on the 17th inst. Mr. Frederick Wagner, father of Doctor F. R. Wagner of this place, aged 91 years.”

“This one life by its lengthened span connects us in its beginning with Revolutionary times. Mr. Wagner was born in 1777 of German parentage, though in this country and spent most of his long life in Chanango County, New York. Throughout his prolonged course from Early Youth until the declining strength of great age called for well earned rest, it was a scene of unremitting industry and endeavor. In this and in the remarkable temperance which always characterized him he was a model, and those old fashioned virtues were made more lustrous in him by an eminent devotion to family duties and general probity and uprightness. His was truly a useful and honorable life.

“His declining days for the last nine years have been spent with his son, Dr. F. W. Wagner, of this place, and until within a year or two, carrying upon his cheeks the fresh and ruddy glow, left there even by four score years of toil, along with temperance, health and upright working.”

SCOTT FAMILY

On May 22, 1740, Alexander Breckenridge appeared before the Court of Orange County, Va., which was then the County Seat of both Orange and Augusta Counties, and proved his lawful entry into the Colonies at his own expense. He had landed at the Port of Philadelphia 1728 and remained in Pa. until 1740. He was born in Ayershire, Scotland; was driven from his native land by religious persecution in the reign of Charles II. (Waddells History of Augusta County)

Ayrshire was on the west coast of Scotland and a prosperous country; a beautiful place in which to live. It was the birthplace of the Poet, Robert Burns. Born on the River Doon he wrote a poem about it:

“Ye Flowery banks of bonnie Doon
How can ye bloom so fair;
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I so fu’ of care.”

Breckenridge was a leader among his people and was willing to sacrifice his home and happiness for the cause of religious freedom. When he appeared in the Court in Orange, with him were fourteen other families from North Ireland who, like him, were Scotch Covenanters and hunting new lands and freedom. The other families came from Scotland with Breckenridge to North Ireland and thence to Philadelphia and with him to Virginia.

Among the fourteen families was Samuel Scott and his wife Jean and his eldest son, John, and his brother, Robert, and wife, Ann, and their children, George, Esther and Mary. Soon afterwards came Jean, the mother of Samuel. Jean and he had other sons and daughters. Breckenridge bought land and settled near Staunton and was a commissioner in the Presbyterian Church of Tinkling Spring. Samuel Scott also bought lands and joined the church.

The early settlers of the mountain districts of Virginia found the country filled with marauding Indians which they had to guard against and fight with. The woods were filled with wolves and other ferocious animals and the land had to be cleared by hard labor before any crops could be raised. The Scotch Irish who came to settle there were poor. The lands in that part of Virginia sold for a dollar per acre but farm implements and supplies were not to be had at any price. The inventory of Samuel's estate shows his personal property consisted of "4 slaves, value $283.00, 33 spoons, noggers and trenchers $1.66, 2 pairs of breeches $1.66, no table or chairs."

The Scotch immigrants were generally illiterate and most of them could not write their own names. They had large families and no schools. They were hard workers and industrious and strong members of the church.

When the Scotts came to Virginia, Staunton was a town of twenty houses. A land promoter Beverly had a patent for several thousand acres which he sold to the settlers. The sons of Samuel settled near Staunton, except Benjamin, James and David who settled in Hampshire County, back in the Blue Ridge Mountains. They were all, however, in the same section of Virginia and near to each other. Part of Hampshire County is now in West Virginia, and it was in that part that Benjamin, the son of Samuel, settled and his son, James, was born there. Several brothers of Samuel and numerous Scotts from the same place in Ireland settled in nearby counties of Virginia.

LINEAGE

JEAN SCOTT, bn. about 1665 in Ayrshire, Scotland emigrated with her husband with the Breckenridge party to North Ireland and settled in Tyrone County. She came to America with Breckenridge and a number of Scotch families and settled near Chester, Pa., and removed with the Scotts to Augusta County, Va., about 1740. The only record of her is in the will of her son Samuel written in 1748. She was then living probably 90 years old and died soon after that date. We have no other information about her or her husband.

She did not come with Samuel to register at Orange but arrived at a later time. Her children known to have come with her to Virginia were Samuel, Robert, William, and George and a daughter, Sarah, who married Thomas Hutchenson, 1762. Samuel, a grandson, also came with her but his father had probably died in Ireland.

bn. about 1680, Ayrshire, Scotland. Removed to North Ireland, probably Tyrone County. Likely the same place that Thomas Hutcheson lived that was Shanagreen, Parish Donough, Henry County, Tyrone, Ireland.

He came from Ireland about 1730 to Philadelphia and bought land and settled in Chester County June 29, 1734.

Removed with Breckenridge party to Augusta County, Va., 1740 and bought land there on Cub Run, on north side of North River, a branch of the Shenandoah River, about twenty-five miles Northwest of Staunton. Member of the Tinkling Spring Church and the Rocky Spring Church at the edge of Blue Ridge Mts.

He made a will in 1748 naming his brother Robert and Robert Hook executors. His estate was Small and litigation ensued between his son John and Samuel's second wife and it was several years before it was settled. He had only a small amount of personal property.

Mar. 1st, about 1700 in Ireland or Scotland, JEAN ..... dd. near 1742, Augusta Co. Va. There is some reason to believe that she was Jean Hook, Dau. of Robert Hook, who died in Augusta County, in 1772.

Children of this Marriage

BENJAMIN, (<sup>2</sup>Samuel, <sup>1</sup>Jean) bn. about 1705 in Scotland or North Ireland. Came to America with his father and settled first in Pennsylvania. Removed with his father to Hampshire County, Va., now a part of W. Va. He paid a recording fee for a deed 1754. He died in 1762, leaving three minor children, James, Joseph, and Benjamin, Jr., and a son, John, of age. His brother David was appointed guardian of the three minors and they lived with him until of age, in Hampshire County.

He had probably been married in Ireland.

The other children of Samuel are:

John, bn. 1708 in Ireland. It was stated in a court proceeding 1748 that he was then 40 years old. dd. 1764.

Adonijah, little is known about him.

David, settled in Hampshire Co. Owned land on Middle River. Augusta Co.

James, unmarried.

Joseph, owned 24 acres in Augusta Co. (See Valentine Papers)

Sarah, Mar. Thomas Hutcheson. Owned land near Elk Run.

Phebe, No record.

Rachel, No record.

Samuel married 2d time and had two daughters. Mary and Jean.

JAMES, (Son of Benjamin,) (<sup>3</sup>Benjamin, <sup>2</sup>Samuel, <sup>1</sup>Jean) bn. 1742 or 1743, Hampshire County, Va. now part of W. Va. dd. after 1800 in Ross County, Ohio.

Mar. about 1770, Hampshire Co., Va., to Elizabeth ----- . He appears in the census of 1782 in Hampshire Co., Va., and left soon after that and went to Kentucky. He settled in Mason County, then a part of Bourbon County with a general migration of Scotch people from Virginia. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and when the Rev. Robert W. Finley led a colony of his church members to Ohio, Ross County, James went with him to Chillicothe and settled there. He was a tax payer in Bourbon Co. 1791 and was the owner of a lot in Chillicothe, in 1800. He was Justice of the Peace in Ross County, and performed five marriages between Sep. 1798 and Mar. 12, 1799. dd. in Ross County, Ohio.

bn. 1780 in Mason or Bourbon County, Kentucky. It may be that he was born in Hampshire Co., Virginia, as his father did not leave that county until after 1782 but the family tradition is that he was born in Kentucky. dd. between 1830 and 1840, Fayette County, Ohio. He was a farmer and came to Ohio with his father between 1796 and 1800. He owned lot 27, in Chillicothe, Ohio, in 1800.

He was undoubtedly the Joseph Scott who served in the War of 1812, in the mounted Company of Thomas Lewis from Ross County. (See Ohio in the War of 1812)

His son, Jonathan Scott, died in 1838 and was buried in the Spring Bank Cemetery. Union Township, Ross County.

In the census of 1820 he is shown to have a family in Fayette County, but he does not appear in either the 1820 or 1840 census, which indicates that he came to Fayette County after 1820 and died before 1840.

Mar. in Ross County, Ohio, Jan. 31, 1805, Martha Finley, Dau. of Rev. Robert W. Finley, Presbyterian Minister, and one of the prime movers in the settlement of Chillicothe. The family tradition is that Samuel and Simon were twins but the census of 1856 states that Samuel was born in 1811 and Simon in 1812. Samuel and Simon appear in the census of 1840 of Fayette County, Ohio but they do not appear in the census of 1830. Samuel married in 1833 and Simon in 1836. Germans, called Pennsylvania Dutch. The original spelling in German was Klein. It was also written by some, Kline, Clyne, Cleyn, Kleyn, Clain and in other ways.

PETER KLEIN, bn. 1724, in the Paletine or lower Rhine provinces of Germany, including the towns of Wurtenburg. Strassburg, and others. He arrived in Philadelphia, Pa., Sep. 3, 1742, and was then 18 years of age. He probably first settled in Pennsylvania and went to the Shenandoah Valley before the Revolution. His name appears in the census of 1785 as a resident of Shenandoah County with his wife. See ship list 93A, 93B, published in the "Pioneer Germans" vol. 1, p. 323 and 325.

Abingdon, Polk Township, Jefferson County, age, 69, with his wife, Catherine, age 65. Both born in Virginia.

Mar. Sep. 1808, Fredericks County, Virginia. Eaty or Eady, Ramey, bn. near 1785 in Frederick Co., Virginia. We assume that she died near 1818 as Henry Cline had children after that date by a second wife. Eaty was often pronounced Eady and was probably a modification of the English name Edith. Catherine Ann Cline named her first child Eady Jane. See book, "Ramey Families," by Dr. Ramey of Ohio.

Child

Catherine Ann Cline, bn. 1814, Fredericks Co., Virginia. dd. about 1900. Mar. Samuel Scott.

FINLEY

ROBERT W. FINLEY, Presbyterian Minister, bn. near 1755 in Pa. or New Jersey. Of Scotch Irish descent. Said to be a brother of Samuel Finley, President of Princeton College in New Jersey. They were both born in Pa. of parents who came in Scotch Irish immigration from 1725 to 1755. He moved to North Carolina and studied for the Presbyterian Ministry. He received his license at Orange, N. C. 1784 (Scotch-Irish, vol. 2, p. 128) He removed from N. C. to Tenn. and then to Ky. He arrived in Ky. about 1785 and was a preacher in the churches of Mason and Bourbon Counties.

In 1796 he induced his congregations to join in a body the settlement under General Nathaniel Masse on the Scioto River in Ohio on account of his dislike of Slavery in Ky. He freed his slaves and moved his family to Ross County, Ohio, 1796. He organized the first Presbyterian Church in Chillicothe and 2d in Ohio. He died in Ross County.

It is probable that Joseph Scott was with Major Grogham at the Defense of Fort Stephenson which interested the Finleys to circulate the letter and make the gift of the sword to the Major.
